“I’m really happy that I can continue my conservation efforts in Australia” he said. “What kills me is the amount of native wildlife being killed by these species. If I see a wild dog, I do my job.”

CONTINUING CONSERVATION IN AUSTRALIA.

DIDIER SAMBAT

Didier Sambat hails from the island nation of Mauritius. Much of his childhood consisted of going hiking with his father and assisting him with conservation projects. In Mauritius hunting is reserved for the privileged. Upon moving to Australia 13 years ago, Didier found it easier to become involved in hunting. It means he is able to continue his conservation efforts in his new home, protecting native plant and animal species from prey and environmental damage.
